Welcome to the 2019 CESAA Conference

Dear colleagues, presenters, distinguished guests and students,

Welcome to our 2019 Contemporary European Studies Association of Australia (CESAA) conference entitled “Europe in a Year of Transition: Opportunities and Challenges”. As you are aware, we are witness to evolving developments in Europe and the European Union (EU) – themes that are in need of considered debate, ideas and constructive exchange. As the President of CESAA, I am delighted that we are hosting this conference and pleased to see such participation from scholars and diplomats encompassing many themes of European studies as presented through the array of papers, plenary sessions, and panels from across Australia, New Zealand, Korea, Malaysia and other parts of the world.

This conference has an impressive turnout and the makings of a very successful two-day conference deliberation, which could only occur with the support from the following organisations. They include the Contemporary European Studies Association of Australia (CESAA), RMIT EU Centre of Excellence, Swinburne University of Technology, ANU Centre for European Studies (ANUCES), and the EU Studies Association - Asia Pacific (EUSAAP) our regional EU studies association. A special mention to the National Centre for Research on Europe (NCRE) at the University of Canterbury in Christchurch, New Zealand, for promoting the conference far and wide.

In closing, I would like to wish all participants of the conference a successful two days of discussion and debate and strongly recommend that scholars and students seek out the riches of this network which will further the important field of European studies.

Again, welcome and all the best for the conference.

Bruno Mascitelli
